Early Study Habits

Learning experiences that are stimulating, fun, and organized can set your child on the right track early. To set the stage for learning:

- Start “school” activities as early as age 2 by reading to your child and encouraging them to draw, paint, and play music.
- Spend time with them while they work on their school activities. Children love getting attention from their parents/guardians.
- Vary the school-like activities and subject matter every so often.
- Have a quiet place for your child to study or sit and read so they avoid distractions.
- Set aside homework time with your child so that studying becomes part of their routine.
- If your child seems stuck on a study session have them take a break, then go back to it.
- Repeat, repeat, repeat. Children learn by doing. Encourage them to review material again and write notes while they study.
- As your child becomes more independent, start to pull back your involvement a little and just remind them about their studies.
